The submission process

Please read the submission instructions below then click here to access the EasyChair submission system to submit your abstract.

Submission involves the following phases:

a) Setting up an EasyChair account (unless you already have an EasyChair account)

b) Abstract Submission

c) Full Paper Submission

d) Full Paper Re-Submission (in cases where reviewers request changes to the paper).

Committee members will review all submissions and only those accepted during the preceding phase will progress to the next. All submissions and reviews for this conference will be facilitated via the online EasyChair system. This system allows you as author to submit your abstract and paper and receive responses from reviewers. In order to use the system, you will need to set up an EasyChair account.

Download instructions on how to set up an EasyChair account, submit an abstract and submit a paper here and submit your abstract using the EasyChair abstract submission facility.

Download the Transfer of Copyright Agreement form here. This form must be signed by all authors, and should be sent to conference@ineer2013.org.za and to ineer@ineer.org when you submit your paper. Please ensure that this reaches the organisers well before 15 September.

Abstract submission

Abstract submission is OPEN. Please access the EasyChair submission facility for abstract submissions here.

Please note: Abstracts should be between 100 and 500 words and submitted using the online system by entering the information into the fields provided online only. Please do not upload an abstract as a document.

Please do not upload a paper before the abstract is accepted.

Authors will be informed on the abstract review decisions within 7 days.

Full paper submission

Full paper submission will be facilitated via EasyChair for authors of accepted abstracts.

Please submit your paper via the EasyChair submission system as an MS Word file strictly in accordance with the template instructions.

The paper instructions and template is available here

Unguided tours and other places to visit

Many unguided excursions are available for you to experience in your spare time. Listed below are some of the popular places to visit:

Artscape

The Artscape Theatre Centre, which belongs to the provincial administration, was opened on 19 May 1971 as the Nico Malan Theatre Centre. In line with the new South African political dispensation and the concurrent changes the complex was renamed to Artscape in March 2001.

Historically the Cape Performing Arts Board (CAPAB) was instituted in the early sixties of the twentieth century. The aim was to promote the performing arts. The arts councils received sufficient government subsidies to fund various art forms as well as the operational requirements of the theatre facilities.

Baxter Theatre Centre

The Baxter Theatre Centre at the University of Cape Town endeavors to present and host the best of South African Performing arts. The Objective is to reflect the culture of all the people of South Africa on our stages and our foyer and galleries. We envisage a vibrant cultural centre developing an interactive relationship with our local and university communities. We strive to present cutting-edge and major works from South Africa and mater pieces from the international repertoire.

Chavonnes Battery Cannon Museum

The Chavonnes Battery Museum celebrates the life, death and re-birth of Cape Town's oldest major fortification except for the Castle of Good Hope. Built at the instigation of Governor Maurice or Mauritz Pasque, Marquis de Chavonnes, it was the first of a series of lethal defensive works which for most of the 18th Century deterred sea-borne aggressors on either side of the Dutch East India Company outpost which was later to be called "Cape Town".

When completed in 1726 the Chavonnes Battery was a massive fortification, built in the shape of a splay-legged "U", whose stone-faced wall reared up from the rocks at the very water's edge and mounted 16 great guns which between them had an arc of fire of nearly 180 degrees.

The battery continued in active service till 1860, when construction of the Alfred Basin began. Part of it, including the left side-wall, was totally demolished, the stone being re-used in constructing the new docks. The rest vanished beneath warehouses and later a fish-processing factory. The Chavonnes Battery became a legend remembered by only a handful of Capetonians, doomed to remain hidden forever.

Or so it seemed. But in 1999 the Board of Executors obtained the site for its new head office. The BoE had the battery scientifically excavated by archaeologists of the University of Cape Town led by Tim Hart, who re-discovered the exact location of the site. Then it created a magnificent museum in the basement, thereby preserving this important but almost forgotten piece of early Cape history for generations yet to come.

Mariner's Wharf

On the magnificent coastal; drive from Cape Town to Cape Point is Hout Bay and Mariner's Wharf, the first harbor front emporium in Africa and the Southern Hemisphere. Conceptualized and built by Hout Bay's own Stanley Dorman, it continues to grow under his, wife's Pam's, and sons Garth and Anton's watchful eyes. Its restaurants, shops and markets exude a maritime ambience as is nowhere else to be found. Mariner's Wharf is a wonderful place, a place where the famous and locals, jetsetters and tourists rub shoulders with venerable fishing captains and old salts.

Rhode's Memorial

The magnificent floodlit memorial to Cecil John Rhodes, built in 1912, stands on the slopes of Devil's Peak, on the Northern flank of Table Mountain. The Rhodes Memorial was Financed by public subscription raised from the estimated 30 000 citizens of Cape Town in deference for all that Rhodes had accomplished, and the very considerable contribution he had made to the development and increasing prosperity of Southern Africa, during his dynamic 32 years in this Country. The monument was designed by Sir Francis Macey and Sir Herbert Baker. Incorporating Doric columns, the classical architecture so revered by CJR, the eight lions, were cast "in situ" by J.W Swan, modeled upon those protecting Nelson column in Trafalgar Square.

The dynamic 'Statue of Energy', rearing at the foot of the 49 steps, (one for each year of his life), was a tribute to the restless drive and determination of Rhodes.

Today Rhodes Memorial is a national landmark, providing a magnificent view of Cape Town out over the airport and the Cape Flats to the Helderberg and Hottentots Holland Mountains.
